

Jeanne Groberg

I grew up in a home that taught me that our Republic thrives only when regular citizens take the trouble to be informed and involved. I was raised on Conservative principles and learned early on to respect and love the Constitution and our country's founding. Among those ideals is the bedrock belief in representative government—fair representation for all—and that is the first reason I am running for City Council now. Out of a total 6 elected officials, the 3 incumbents currently seeking reelection (2 City Council, 1 Mayor) all come from one neighborhood. That's not a slight against them personally, it's just a simple geographical fact, which leaves other areas unrepresented. I am running because I believe every neighborhood matters, and city government should reflect a more balanced representation of our residents. I hope voters in every part of our beautiful city can agree with me on that common principle we as Americans hold dear.

The second reason I'm running is to try to improve transparency in our city government. It's not usually very easy to know what's going on there. Our city website should be kept more accurate, up-to-date, and informative. Our city budget should be readily available online, so citizens can see at a glance where their tax money is being spent. Council meetings could be available via YouTube, as many cities do. I hope voters will agree with me on election day, that transparency in government is also an important basic principle to uphold.

I have never aspired to political office, I am just a regular citizen like you. I am a wife and full-time mother of four, a PTO and classroom volunteer. I have voted in every election and attended every precinct caucus since I turned 18. I have served as a County and State Delegate numerous times, and currently serve as our precinct Vice Chair. I believe in doing my civic duty. I also serve as Vice Chair of the KJH Community Council, and as a Cub Scout den leader. I graduated in Music from BYU, and enjoy singing, playing, and performing when I get the chance. Most of all I love to be with my family, sharing priceless moments and fun adventures together. We moved into our home in Southwest Fruit Heights almost 10 years ago, and have been Davis County natives all our lives. We love living here and raising our family here.

If you believe as I do that Every Neighborhood Matters, I would appreciate your vote this fall.
